We will continue to foster exchanges and encounters with a view to promoting the development of mutual relations. Together with our partners, such as the German-Turkish Dialogue on the Rule of Law, the German-Turkish Initiative for Cooperation on Refugee Relief and such as the Mercator-IPC Fellowship, the Studies Forum Turkey Europe Future, we are particularly important for a Europe that is facing common challenges.

With current political tensions we regard our commitment to civil society dialogue and partnerships at different levels. Successful programmes, such as the Mercator-IPC Fellowship and the Blickwechsel. Contemporary Turkey and the Mercator-IPC Fellowship, are intended to provide a platform for creative and forward-looking ideas.

By means of a strategic partnership with Sabancı University and through the Turkey Europe Future Forum, we want to strengthen European cohesion and the close social and cultural ties between Germany and Turkey. By fostering mutual understanding as a basis for joint action, we have set ourselves the goal of achieving close ties between Turkey, Germany, and Europe into the future, by engaging in dialogue and partnerships at different levels. In establishing an Istanbul office, Stiftung Mercator is highlighting its commitment to the Ruhr region, the home of the foundation’s headquarters and Germany to the Ruhr region, the home of the foundation’s headquarters.

One of Germany’s leading foundations, it is active both nationally and internationally. Stiftung Mercator symbolises the connection between academic science and the humanities. Stiftung Mercator has been promoting projects in and with Turkey for the past ten years. Our engagement began during a period of change, in which Turkey’s political and economic significance for Europe was becoming more pronounced and mutual relations were shaped by the start of accession negotiations between Turkey and the European Union. Although relations between Turkey and the European Union have become more complicated in recent years, we believe that sustainable relations between Germany and Turkey within a unified Europe cluster, through which we want to strengthen European cohesion and the close social and cultural ties between Germany and Turkey.

In this context, it focuses on strengthening intercultural understanding and the dialogue of cultures as a means of promoting tolerance and solidarity, and for a society characterised by an openness to the world, solidarity, and equal opportunities.

In establishing an Istanbul office, Stiftung Mercator feels a strong sense of loyalty to the family and the foundation’s headquarters. Stiftung Mercator feels a strong sense of loyalty to the family and the foundation’s headquarters.

DEAR GUESTS,

Stiftung Mercator has been promoting projects in and with Turkey for the past ten years. Our engagement began during a period of change, in which Turkey’s political and economic significance for Europe was becoming more pronounced and mutual relations were shaped by the start of accession negotiations between Turkey and the European Union. Although relations between Europe and Turkey have become more complicated in recent years, we believe that many of our objectives still hold true: we want to contribute to this relationship by identifying and maximising the enormous potential offered by the close social and cultural ties between Germany and Turkey. By fostering personal exchanges and encounters, we have set ourselves the goal of achieving mutual understanding as a basis for joint action.

Alongside China and Europe, Turkey, as a European neighbour, became part of the key regional focus area of Stiftung Mercator’s international programmes, in which our aim has been to create a dialogue between leading political, academic, and civil society actors and, above all, young people.

By means of a strategic partnership with Sabanci University and through the founding of the German-Turkish Youth Bridge, we have been able to broaden our engagements to include key target groups and add many new partners to our network. Thanks to our work, German and Turkish pupils, teachers, journalists, students, academics, and practitioners now have the opportunity to come together, irrespective of any geographical or cultural boundaries.
Our engagement in Turkey is today an integral part of our newly founded Europe cluster, through which we want to strengthen European cohesion and Europe’s ability to act. We believe that sustainable relations between Germany and Turkey are particularly important for a Europe that is facing common challenges on many levels. New projects, such as the Turkey Europe Future Forum and Task Force 2023, underline the fact that we will only be able to find and implement possible solutions to common challenges in Europe by working together. This process encompasses all forces in society; and faced with current political tensions we regard our commitment to civil society dialogue as even more important than ever.

The official opening of our Istanbul Office marks yet another important milestone in our work in Turkey by highlighting our long-term commitment to dialogue and cooperation. Our staff will represent the foundation at the local level, maintain contact with partners and, together with the team in Essen, supervise existing projects.

We also want to continue to take advantage of the potential offered by the close ties between Turkey, Germany, and Europe into the future, by engaging in dialogue and partnerships at different levels. Successful programmes, such as the Mercator-IPC Fellowship and Blickwechsel. Contemporary Turkey Studies will begin their second funding phase in 2017, while new projects, such as the German-Turkish Initiative for Cooperation on Refugee Relief and the German-Turkish Dialogue on the Rule of Law, are intended to provide impetus for the development of mutual relations. Together with our partners, we will continue to foster exchanges and encounters with a view to promoting trust and understanding as the basis for joint as well as reciprocal action.

ABOUT STIFTUNG MERCATOR AND THE ISTANBUL OFFICE

Stiftung Mercator is a private and independent foundation. Through its work, it strives for a society characterised by an openness to the world, solidarity, and equal opportunities. In this context, it focuses on strengthening Europe; increasing the educational success of disadvantaged children and young people, especially those of migrant origin; driving forward climate change mitigation; and promoting science and the humanities. Stiftung Mercator symbolises the connection between academic expertise and practical project experience. One of Germany’s leading foundations, it is active both nationally and internationally. Stiftung Mercator feels a strong sense of loyalty to the Ruhr region, the home of the founding family and the foundation’s headquarters.

In establishing an Istanbul office, Stiftung Mercator is highlighting its commitment to intensive exchange and close cooperation between Germany and Turkey within a unified Europe. We Europeans can only find and implement solutions to global challenges in today’s complex and multipolar world if we work together. We believe that sustainable relations between Germany and Turkey are particularly important if Europe is to be capable of action.

Registered in September 2015, the Istanbul Office at Sabancı University’s Minerva Palas is a key element of the foundation’s work in its Europe cluster. The staff of the Istanbul office represent Stiftung Mercator at the local level, maintain contact with partners and, together with the team in Essen, oversee ongoing projects in Turkey.

If you should have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact our team in Istanbul.
